

I have known Steve for the past seven years, having been his direct supervisor as well as friend. It is rare that a person can truly be a 'jack-of-all-trades' in a church office and in church work, but Steve filled that role with not only an immense amount of skill in whatever he was asked to do, but with insight and ability to see, and do, things that he simply saw needed to be done. He juggled several positions, from technical director to programming director to communications director, and could (and did) jump in to lead worship at a last minute's notice.

In addition, Steve was a great team builder, leader, and player. He wasn't afraid of giving his opinion, even if it differed from everyone else, but was quick to give full support and effort to whatever decision was chosen by the team or by me, his supervisor - even leaving off the 'told-you-so' when I was wrong (once 😊).

I would highly recommend Steve as a leader, a hard-working servant, and a forward thinking developer of ministry.
